A History of NISCA

By: David H. Robertson, Winter Park, Florida and Frankfort, Michigan

The first meeting of NISCA was held on the front stairs of the old Ohio State Natatorium in March 1934. Each year since then, interscholastic swimming and diving coaches have met at the time and place of the men's or women's Division I Swimming and Diving Championship. Those in attendance then develop and finalize the national program for the coming year.

The college competitive program began in 1897 at the University of Pennsylvania under the direction of the "father of college swimming," George Kistler. Mr. Kistler also gave great leadership to the development of the high school competitive program. In 1904 the University sponsored what is believed to be the first interscholastic swimming meet.

The early leaders of the high school swimming program came from the college ranks. In 1915, Fred W. Luehring became the first editor of the NCAA Swimming Guide. In 1921, Frank W. Sullivan, also an early editor of the NCAA Guide, wrote the first review of the interscholastic swimming season. He also selected the first interscholastic Swimming Team and compiled the first set of National Interscholastic Swimming Records. This was the beginning of the NISCA All-America and Swimming Rules Committees.

In 1926, the all important interscholastic advisory rules committee was formed. This committee gathered prospective rules changes and presented them to the NCAA Rules Committee for adoption. In those early days there was never a year that the NCAA did not follow the wishes of the high school coaches. John Miller of Mercersburg, PA, the fourth President of NISCA, became the first chairman of the Advisory Rules Committee and served for eleven years. Another member of the committee was Harry M. Boardman, who became the first President of NISCA in 1934. The Advisory Rules committee functioned until 1973, when the National Federation of State High School Associations assumed the leadership for writing the high school swimming and diving rules.

In the early years of high school competition, events included the two lengths of the pool "dash," the 100 and 200 yard swims, the plunge, and four and six man relays. Events like the backstroke, breaststroke and fancy diving soon found their way into the meets. Coaches spiced up their meets with special novelty events such as underwater swimming and night shirt races. On February 26, 1907, at the New York City High School indoor championships, a boy named Guiteras, from Commerce, New York won the 20 yard Wash Tub race in the record time of 17 and 2/5ths seconds. The record was still on the books 20 years later, and may still be there today.

The 1950s and early 1960s were exciting years for high school swimming. A major decision raised the height of the starting blocks to thirty inches. The world of swimming screamed when the high schools voted to go with a "no-hand touch" in the freestyle races, but the rest of the world would soon follow. In rapid succession, the 150 individual medley was accepted into competition and later was extended into the 200 yard individual medley. Later the 100 yard butterfly and the 100 yard breaststroke were added. When the breaststroke was added, the butterfly stroke was also changed – no longer could you use a breaststroke kick with a butterfly arm stroke. The "dolphin" kick became the legal kick for the fly. The 400 yard freestyle, an event added in the 1950s, gave way to the 500 yard freestyle in 1974. The 200 free relay evolved into the 400 free relay; then in 1990, the old 200 yard relay came back into the program as the third relay event. Additional dives were added to the dual and championship programs, and of course, were no longer called gainers, cutaways, and swans. Beginning with the 1954-1955 season, Interval Training had been developed and was being used extensively in the high schools, resulting in no more "plodding along" routines of swim 40 lengths, kick 40 lengths, pull 40 lengths, do some slow-fasts and then go home. Coaches were able to give swimmers short to-the-point instructions during short rest periods between swims. Swimmers now worked hard on stroke technique as well as physical conditioning.

Today NISCA provides leadership to over 340,000 competitive swimmers, divers and water polo players in some 15,000 schools. The impact that high schools have on the national aquatic sports in America is tremendous. Consider the number of pools owned by high schools and the number of men and women hired each year to conduct aquatic programs, such as learn to swim, advanced lifesaving, basic physical education aquatic classes and other noncompetitive aquatic skills. Add special challenges of coaching athletes, whose abilities range from those of beginning swimmers, divers and water polo players to nationally ranked world class competitors.

NISCA also provides professional leadership to those who direct America's great grassroots swimming programs. The membership receives the bi-monthly NISCA Journal as well as other professional materials. The NISCA governing body includes four elected officers and eight Zone Directors, who work directly with the state delegates. Twenty committees round out the organization's all volunteer leadership. NISCA is justifiably proud of its position as a strong national association. The organization's chief responsibility is to provide professional leadership and encouragement to it's 1,400 members who coach the high school boys and girls of America

NISCA PROFESSIONAL AWARDS PROGRAM

by Bill Stetson

The NISCA professional awards program began in 1971 when the first NISCA Outstanding Service Awards were presented. In 1972 the first NISCA Hall of Fame Award was presented. The first high school coach to receive the Collegiate Scholastic Swimming Trophy was David H. Robertson in 1969. Prior to that time, only one certificate was presented and it had always gone to a college coach. In 1979 the award was changed to two recipients, one college coach and one high school coach.

Tony Malinowski (Michigan) was NISCA's first awards chairman and served from 1972 to 1979. Dick Segrist (Ohio) was the chairman from 1979 to 1983. Bill Stetson (Illinois and now South Carolina) took over as awards chairman in 1983 until 2017. Mel Roberts (Utah) took over as chairman of the committee in 2017.

Until 1983 the awards were decided upon at the national meeting and presented at the Saturday morning business meeting. In 1983, the first real NISCA Award Committee was formed. It was decided that the awards chair should collect resumes and present them to the awards committee to decide who would be on the ballot. A mail vote of the entire membership was conducted to determine the recipients of each award. The recipients were then notified and invited to the NISCA Professional Awards Banquet as a guest of NISCA. This procedure was followed for many years until it was decided not enough mail ballots were being returned. As a result of a By-Law change the awards committee was given the task of determining the recipients of each award. The committee spends the year individually reviewing and researching the resumes and then the final decision is based upon discussion and a final vote of the entire committee at the Annual Meeting.

For several years the Outstanding Service Award was an 11 x 14 paper certificate with a NISCA gold seal, signed by the president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer and the awards chair. It was presented in a black glass frame. The two major NISCA Awards, the Collegiate-Scholastic Trophy (1957) and the NISCA Hall of Fame Award (1971) were grant funded by Bruce Hopping's Kalos Kagathos Foundation. Those award winners were presented with a metal plaque below a photograph of the award mounted in a wooded frame. In 2002, the Kalos Kagathos Foundation funded a sculpture of each award, which the recipients now receive at the awards banquet. The originals of these two awards are housed at the International Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale, FL.

The Ocean Pool Company was one of the first professional awards sponsors but the most significant change in the NISCA Awards Program came in 1994, when Jim and Steve Hasty of Hasty Awards started sponsoring all of the NISCA Awards. Because of their generous support the NISCA Awards Banquet has become the highlight of the NISCA Convention and one of the most inspiring awards programs in the country.

In 1976, after determining that many national organizations presented their award recipients with a ring, NISCA decided to do the same. A committee of Bill Stetson, Dave Robertson and Bernie Elsner of Herff Jones designed the NISCA Outstanding Service Award ring which is now presented to each Outstanding Service Award recipient. Those who receive the Hall of Fame are given a special NISCA watch.

The NISCA Professional Awards Banquet program grew from one page in 1972 to the current 14 pages. This expansion allowed for the inclusion of the resumes of the current recipients of the Outstanding Service, Hall of Fame and Collegiate-Scholastic awards. Also added was a list of all the past recipients of each award. The program now includes a brief history of NISCA, the current NISCA Letterhead, NISCA Past Presidents, Charter Members of NISCA, NISCA Life Members and Honorary Members and all other current award winners. Other awards presented are the Excellence in Coaching Awards, NISCA Commendation Award, and the NISCA Special Service and Appreciation Awards.
